SUCCESSFUL FLIGHT IS MADE BY BALDWIN

High Altitude is Conquered in First Tryout of the Aeroplane This Afternoon. Invited Guests Witness the First Flight Ever Made In Nevada

Ivy Baldwin made the first real flight with his new machine at the Rayera ranch this afternoon in the presence of a number of invited guests. For the past several days Baldwin and his associates have been experimenting with the machine and testing out the engines. This morning he announced that he would make the first attempt to raise from the ground.

The machine was run out into the field and with a short start turned the reflector and in an instant shot into the air. The aviator only intended to raise about twenty feet from the ground in the first trial but kept his machine pointed upward until about thirty-five feet had been reached. The machine then started across the field and from the time the start was made until he glided to earth the machine was under the absolute control of the driver.

After alighting Baldwin stated that he had been satisfied all along that the machine was a great success and that the trial today simply bore out his opinion of the machine. He also remarked that the experiment of today settled the question of altitude once and for all. His assistants are enthusiastic over the successful tryout had today and it is probable that several more lengthy flights will be made during the week.

The successful flight of today assures the carnival of one of the finest aviation meets that has been seen on the coast.

RENO IS NOW THE MECCA

For Sporting Men in All Parts of The World and City Is Booming

"On to Reno" is the cry of the sporting fraternity, the gambler and the man looking for a job and a chance to see the fight on the 4th. The streets teem with people, for mer residents who have been lured to the city again by the chances to make a stake, followers of fights and fighters, newspaper men from all over the country, ex-fighters and trainers, in fact all who can and have the price, are on the way and the riverside burg is booming as it never boomed before, although the life of the boom will be short. The gambling houses are doing an enormous business and new ones are being opened up and hundreds of men put to work. In this line it will probably be the last big stand of the gambling fraternity, at least for this year, but it will certainly be a good one.

The Journal has the following to say regarding the Reno of today. Touched by the magic influence of the coming big fight, Reno is again the Reno of the golden age when Mohawk wash flirting with the $20 mark, when gold was the coin of the realm, when overnight millionaires with bulging pockets and plethora bank accounts made a rattling racket with the combined clatter of roulette balls and popping of champagne corks.

Again the swinging doors of the temples of chance, like those of the shrine of Janus in peace, have been taken from their hinges. Again a cosmopolitan crowd rubs elbows in the cafes, lobbies and streets of the city.

Within a day the missing and packed-up wings of the roulette tables have been taken down and attached in a dozen gambling places, the price of the proverbial "white chop" has risen from ten cents to twenty-five cents and the "limit" is mounting heavenward over the faro banks.

"One and two," meaning $100 and $200, has replaced the customary $25 and $50 limit at faro and the shifting out of a pack of cards now means the rapid transit of from $1,000 to $5,000, where but a short space before it meant the slow transmission of some silver from the pocket of the gambling man to the other.

Faces lost and unseen for years have come back to inhabit the changing kaleidoscope-faces of men who went to Rawhide, who trekked to Pioneer, who heard the call of Bannock, and who responded to the beckoning specter at the top of Jarbidge mountain. All are back and the voice of the paid "entertainer" is again heard troling out the ancient and honorable melody of "Dear Old Girl."

Today, in all probability, the Sagebrush club, Stout & Miller's miniature Monte Carlo, long closed, will reopen, employing fifty men. Tomorrow, the Oberon, closed, pried half-open and closed again, may open to the speculator. Then again, it may not.

Charles Dreyer is in town and it is reported that he again cast long ing eyes at the Oberon and would open it. The lease of Wacker & Co. does not expire until July 3d, and it is said that a coterie of gambling proprietors heretofore made it worth while to allow the closed place to remain closed.

It is said that on the rumor that the Oberon would open again, pandemonium broke loose. Those who had helped to keep the place closed in dull times insisted that it remain so. Protests arose and finally it is

DICKERSON REPLIES

To Protests Regarding Holding Fight in State. Will Take No Action

At Ely last night Governor Dickerson made the following statement regarding the holding of the Jeffries-Johnson fight in Nevada. The statement comes as practically an answer to the many protests that are being daily received at the office of the chief executive in this city and settles once and for all the fight question as far as the governor is concerned.

"I believe the Jeffries-Johnson fight will be strictly on its merits, and so long as I am convinced as I now am of this fact, I will not interfere or make any effort to stop it. The law of the state licenses this form of sport, if the license is paid and the other requirements observed. If I was convinced the fight was not to be on its merits, I would promptly see that it was not carried through in this state."

NEXT SESSION HERE

The next session of the grand lodge of Odd Fellows will be held in Carson City, this city having been selected yesterday before the adjournment was taken.

CENSUS INCREASE

According to the report of Census Taker Murray there are fifty-seven more children attending school in this city this year than last year. This will mean an increase in the state apportionment of school money sufficient to pay the salary of one teacher.

declared a further inducement was offered which effectually persuaded all interested to refrain from again opening the deserted gambling store.

That a saloon may be opened there is within the possibilities.

Rooms for rent are becoming scarce; waiters are increasing in population at the restaurants; a local barber has advertised in San Francisco for more wielded of the often keen blade; automobiles are buzzing around like cash carriers in the department stores; nor can Solomon's wives in all their glory be compared with the female visitors.

The lights of Reno shine merrily through the night; the tread of feet punctuates the silent places, beating a reveille for the sun; the street cars sing a song of nickels and the face of Reno is brightened with a perpetual grin which says "De-lighted."

HIGH SCHOOL PLAY WAS ABLY PRESENTED LAST NIGHT

Benefit for King's Daughters Proved a Great Success in Every Way

The spectator in an audience, enjoying a play such as was presented by the graduating class last evening has no conception of the tireless rehearsing and work, both on the part of the actors and the manager, necessary to the perfection of the performance and often he does not appreciate the situation. The play "A Scrap of Paper" is not like the run of modern plays and is therefore the most difficult for amateurs, especially amateurs just out of school; but thanks to the untiring efforts of Mr. Vanderleith, the Carson City High School gave a very excellent performance and the members are entitled to more than a passing notice.

The leading male character was in the hands of Frank Day and he surely made Prosper Conrout a live character. His stage presence was easy, his reading of the lines all that could be desired and his costumes correct in every detail. At no time did he overact but at all times was the gay, debonaire man of the world who finally surrendered to the superior charms of Suzanne.

Elmer Wiley as Baron de la Glaciere, follows as a close second, his role demanding an entirely different line of acting which was capably met. Gruff, forbidding, crabbed to the outside world but loving his wife with a devotion that surmounted everything else, Wiley portrayed each emotion with more than ordinary skill for a young man.

Charles Williams seemed intended from the beginning of the world for the part of Brismouche, the naturalist, and brought forth many laughs from the audience. Joe Kane, off the stage, is an ideal student and seems the incarnation of all that is solid and sensible and for him to transform himself into a servant with a very keen sense of humor was indeed a surprise to all. He has a good voice which added greatly to the part.

"All the world loves a lover" and Clyde Heidinger as Anatole very much in love with Mathilde but too timid and too bashful to assert his rights, made such a charming that he had the admiration and sympathy of everyone present.

George McCreery had a minor part, but he gave faithful attention to the duties of the role, a commendable trait, for he who is faithful in small things will be the better fitted for the larger duties.

Miss Frances Tucker as the wife of Baron de la Glaciere, was a sweet and pretty picture in her 1861 gown and crinoline and ably portrayed the character of the timed creature who feared to incur her husband's wrath and lose his love.

Miss Florence Burlingame, the quick-witted Suzanne, clever to her finger tips, lost no opportunity to display her talents as a shrewd young lady, an able opponent of the clever Prosper. Miss Burlingame is very natural in her acting and seemed perfectly at home on the boards.

Miss Louise Vierira made a most attractive and vivacious Mathilde, and no one blamed Anatole in losing his head about her.

The character of Mlle. Zenobie in the hands of Miss Katherine McCreery, became very real and looked much laughter, as Miss Katherine proved so solicitous of the conduct and welfare of her brother and his ward.

Miss Emma Lopez's rendition of the housekeeper's role was painstaking and good, her deep, rich voice adding materially to the sternness of the character.

Miss Mary Casson's "Pauline" was a clever bit of acting and she made a most dainty and charming French maid.

The stage settings were remarkably true to the play and elicited rounds of applause.

Mr. Vanderleith may well be proud of the entire affair and he deserves every iota of praise that he is receiving.

A harmonious quartette by Mrs. E. B. Yerington, Miss Stewart and Messrs. Hunting and Thomas delighted the audience after the second act and the disappointment was intense when the singers declined to sing again.

Sullivan and Corbett Clash

RENO, June 23.—Today John L. Sullivan was refused admittance to Jeffries' camp by James J. Corbett. Bitter words were passed between the two men owing to articles that have appeared in eastern papers written by Sullivan. The latter only reached the gate of the training quarters when he was met by Corbett and told to be on his way. Sullivan was accompanied by his manager and a number of friends and was seeking an interview for the Hearst papers.

Don't wait. Do it now. Order your carnival suit of clothes of Will Day. No matter how light your pocket book, Will can fit you out.

Porter Charlton Confesses Murder

NEW YORK, June 23.—Porter Charlton, whose wife's body was found floating in the lake at Coma, Italy, some days ago and who has been searched for in parts of Europe, arrived here today and was arrested while he was leaving the boat. He was taken to the Tombs and later confessed to having killed his wife after a quarrel by hitting her over the head with a mallet. He then threw her body into the lake and made his escape. According to his story the murder resulted from frequent quarrels between the two.
